

CALLS HOME BREW CLEAN-UP HOPELESS

Davis Couldn't Stop It With 10,000 Spies in Pennsylvania, Says Wood

"WHY NOT TAX VIOLATORS?"

"It will be impossible for Prohibition Director Davis to effect a clean-up of the home brewers of Pennsylvania even with ten thousand spies," Charles S. Wood, executive chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment said yesterday. He was commenting upon the instructions received by Director Davis from Washington to stop the activities of home wine and beer makers.

"From all reports home brewing is being conducted on a vast scale in Pennsylvania at this time. All over the State, we hear, scores of families are co-operating in making up large supplies of wine. Recipes, old and new, are being utilized, and children are gathering fruit for the making of beer. Pops of cheap moonshine and the bootleggers' henchmen have caused thousands of Pennsylvania to turn to home brewing. They see no crime in using nature's ingredients provided by the Creator to make up a little wine for possible illness or for a little harmless sociability. They have failed utterly to get the viewpoint of the prohibition fanatic who has declared by his attitude that it is better to continue the reign of the bootlegger and his poisons than to permit usage of light wines and beer.

"In order to stop home brewing in Pennsylvania Director Davis will have to extend the jails so as to hold half the population of the State. He will have to tag and register every apple, every blackberry and every elderberry. He will need enough tags to keep the tag manufacturing mills of the world going for the next century. He will have to conceal home brew spies in every berry patch and every apple orchard in the State, and he will have to install a force of Tom-the-Poepers in every village and every hamlet and in every farming district—Tom-the-Poepers who can shoot a wicked eye through keyholes and into dusty cellar windows.

"In the cities and towns he will have to put three or more spies in every block. Surely, Director Davis received a large order from Washington when he was told to clean up the home brewers of Pennsylvania.

"We, who are for enforcement, but have little respect for the law that he is trying to enforce, wish him luck in an endeavor which would have stamped a Hevelius on the map of Pennsylvania.

"This is going to be an expensive matter, however, for the taxpayer, and in view of the unequal distribution of the $20,000,000 extra income tax we now have to pay for prohibition we have a suggestion make which will distribute the burden of the billion or two extra this policy will cost the country as soon as it is fairly under way.

"Why not have a home brew tax? The income tax returns could be used to assess it and a minimum charge might be fixed of say $1 per month for everybody whose income is subject only to the normal tax, with a graduated surtax as the income increased. No doubt many millions could be raised in this way, and we could increase our army of prohibition spies probably until we could have several in every block in every city of any size in the country. In this way a regular tax could be kept on every house, and, if necessary, a special force could be maintained to visit the enforcement agents' cellars at intervals and levy on the amount of drinkables they contain."
